

Abstract of the Disclosure

Systems and methods for decreasing transmission timing variations include precharging a data channel at a level before data is sent over the 5 channel. The driver sets the level in response to the reception of a precharging control signal.